The record of the Sing-Out, the Wet-Down, and the Senior Dinner, which took place in the time-honored places, must be included with any account of the exercises of Commencement Week.

The Nineteen Hundred and Eight Sing-Out was held Friday afternoon, June 12, at quarter-past five in Rollins Chapel. The graduating class, in caps and gowns, and headed by Marshal John Baldwin Glaze, marched across the Green to the Chapel. Acting President John King Lord presided, and Prof. Charles Henry Morse was at the organ. The program, which was in charge of Arthur Turner Soule, chorister, was as follows:

Processional, Priests' March from "Athalie," Mendelssohn; prelude, Andante Con Moto, organ and violin, H. P. Kelley '10, Hess; anthem, "The Radiant Morn," Woodworth; responsive reading, psalm 16; Gloria Patri, Thallis; Amesbury, "Come, Let Us Anew Our Journey Pursue," solo by J. A. Swenson '09, Dr. Arnold; prayer; hymn, "Now the Day is Over," class of 1908; benediction; recessional, Priests' March, Mendelssohn.

After the exercises in the Chapel the class marched to the Old Pine in the College Park, where the public initiation of the Palaeopitus was held. The initiates were: George Thomas Burns, Emile Henri Erhard, George Francis Kennedy, Benjamin Lang, Stanley Winthrop Leighton, Jasper Karl Mason, Maurice Readey, Frank Joseph Reagan, Edward Dillon Rich, Wallace Mason Ross, George Henry Schildmiller, Eugene Miller Stark, Ralph Lauris Theller, Herman Luther Walker, Daniel Edward Watson, Thomas Cedric Wellsted, Joseph Washburn Worthen.

The initiation ceremony consisted simply of affixing signatures to the constitution, but its very simplicity made it impressive.

At seven o'clock a new feature was inaugurated on the east side of the campus, where a class singing contest was held. The judges, Prof. Charles F. Richardson '71, Andrew Marshall '01, Secretary A. Karl Skinner '03, and Paul Felt '09, announced their decision in favor of the junior class.

The Wet-Down and its accompanying features took place in the early evening. At seven o'clock the classes met on the Green, and marched past the various buildings, which were cheered by each class in turn. The College then marched to the home of Acting President Lord and in their cheers for him expressed their appreciation. Returning to the Senior Fence, the classes, with the exception of a few Sophomores and Freshmen, drank lemonade, and the Senior Fence was given over to the Juniors.

In this simple though significant exercise the senior and junior classes were represented by Joseph Joyce Donahue of Medford, Mass., and Frederick Aloysius Carroll of Worcester, Mass. Mr. Donahue reminded the men of 1908 of the deep significance of the gift which they were about to receive, and expressed the hope that the feeling of true leadership which it symbolizes would always be preserved. Mr. Carroll, receiving the gift, replied that his class fully realized the responsibility of its position next year, and that it would strongly endeavor to cherish and uphold Dart-mouth's tradition in a manner worthy of the old College.

The events of the day were brought to a close with the Senior Class Dinner in College Hall in the evening. This was the fifth annual dinner given by the President and the Trustees, and ranked with its predecessors as an impressive farewell banquet.

Secretary Ernest Martin Hopkins presided. Previous to introducing the speakers Mr. Hopkins spoke of the origin of the custom of the annual dinner, of the "intermingled feelings of sorrow and pleasure with which, each year, the College sees the departure of a new generation of sturdy sons, strengthened with the experiences of four years of broadening fellowship." He remarked that as a College increases in number it becomes a greater work to maintain the students in unity. However, through the unique means of the College Club, of which every student is equally a member, there prevails today the same constant intimacy and intercourse among the students in all activities, and the same comradeship which bound the smaller numbers together in the years gone by.

Arthur Thompson Stuart, president of the class, was presented as the first speaker, and after some words of gratitude in behalf of the class, read a letter from President Tucker in which he expressed his regret at being obliged to forego meeting with the class in the enjoyment of the class dinner.

In concluding, Mr. Stuart proposed the toast: "To the President and Trustees of Dartmouth College." This brought a most enthusiastic response.

Acting President Lord next spoke. He expressed his deep thanks to the class for "its able leadership of the college body through a year most successful, but which might easily have suffered from a senior class indifferent to the need of unusual prudence and co-operation with the administration."

Mr. Hopkins then presented John Baldwin Glaze, who spoke with deep feeling of his appreciation of what the College had been to him. He said the solid support for clean athletics had been strongly felt, and had helped out immeasurably.

It had been hoped that Mr. Melvin Ohio Adams '71, could be present as one of the representatives of the alumni, but unfortunately he was detained at the last moment. Mr. Andrew Marshall '01, of Boston, spoke most eloquently, in serious vein. Mr. Marshall set forth with great force the true character of "a loyal son of Dartmouth."

Mr. Laurence Metcalf Symmes followed with remarks as secretary of the class.

In introducing Professor Charles Francis Richardson, Mr. Hopkins recalled the high and just tribute paid him by the class in the 1908 Aegis.

Professor Richardson spoke of the strong survival of the democracy under radically changed conditions in the College and the influx of increased wealth in the student body. "It is a democratic college, a college apart from the thought of a man's money, for it takes into consideration merit and character. It is a college where there is democracy of opportunity and aristocracy of attainment."

The evening was made complete by the singing of the "Dartmouth Song."

The exercises of Commencement Week itself were formally opened with the prize speaking for the class of 1866 prizes and the Barge gold medal. The exercises took place in Dartmouth Hall, which was crowded with alumni and friends. Prof. E. B. Watson '02 presided.

There were four contestants for the class of 1866 prizes, which are open to Juniors and Sophomores. The first prize was given to Ralph Lauris Theller '09, of Cambridge, Mass., whose subject was "Present Perils," and the second prize to Clarke Walworth Tobin '10, of South Boston, Mass., who spoke on "The Exclusion of Japanese Children from San Francisco Schools." The Barge medal was won by Arthur Leon Lewis, of Lakeport, N. H., who spoke on "Charles Evans Hughes." Chief Justice Plumer of the New Hampshire Superior Court was the chairman of the board of judges.

All orations of the evening were original. To win the Barge medal is considered the greatest honor possible in Dartmouth undergraduate oratory. The winners, besides Professor Watson, have been: S. A. Murphy '03, Herbert McKennis '04, R. C. Falconer '05, M. S. O'Brien '06, and J. B. Brown '07.

The Baccalaureate Sermon was preached in the College Church Sunday morning by the Rev. Lyman Abbott, D.D., of New York. The auditorium was crowded with alumni and friends. To the music of the war march of the priests, from Mendelssohn's "Athalie," the graduating class, in cap and gown, marched into the church and took seats in the middle front. A choir under the direction of Prof. Charles Henry Morse, sang West's "Te Deum in B Flat."

Selections of scripture were read by the Rev. Frank Latimer Janeway, pastor, and prayer offered by the Rev. Samuel Penniman Leeds, D.D., pastor emeritus. The preacher was presented to the class by Prof. Lord, in behalf of the College.

Doctor Abbott's discourse was a masterful treatment of the text, "Freely Ye have received, freely give." He said in part:

"What are you young men going to do with your education? The end of education is character. The test of character is service. The world will measure you not by what you know, but by what you do.

"Most truth is second-hand; our only knowledge of the Revolutionary war is what other people have told us. Thus all we get through education is second-hand. Every generation passes on truth to the next generation, which accepts it, adds to it, and in turn passes it to the next generation. Thus yesterday produces today and today will produce tomorrow.

"Any theology that scoffs at the past, any theology that treats our forefathers as idiots, any theology that commits to the waste basket all the sacred doctrines and beliefs of the ages is a false theology. You are not to throw away the theology of the past. Sift for the truth, and then apply it. We need reform, social, medical, theological, but the roots must be in the past. No reform will grow that begins by cutting the tree from its ancient root. Nourish it, graft it if you will, but don't destroy it.

Preserve what is good in the past but do not let that suffice. When a man tells you that what was good enough for his grandfather is good enough for him, tell him that if his grandfather had thought so our glorious world would be very different from what it is.

"Literature is the interpreter of life. Behind the fossil there was the animal, and we study the fossil to know the animal. Behind the works of Dante there was a master spirit, and we study the works of Dante to know a universal man, and after reading Dante who can think of an Italian as being a Dago? Literature ought to teach us that a great brotherhood can be evolved. It ought to show us the unity of the human race and the great worth of humanity.

"Education takes from the generation that is past and gives to the generation that is to come. Thus you young men are heirs of all the ages; you are trustees for all the ages."

The Vesper Service in Rollins Chapel Sunday evening was conducted by President Tucker. A large choir, under Prof. Charles Henry Morse, gave a superior rendition of Woodworth's "Radiant Morn." President Tucker spoke as follows:

"I want to speak for a few moments upon what seems to me to be the most vital question of a personal sort now before men who desire to have moral influence over their fellow men; namely, how may one, as things are today, free himself from the spirit of self-seeking. In trying to answer this question let us not be impatient of methods which may seem slow or remote. Self-seeking is a state of mind. We must attack it at the source. We shall not get on at all in any efforts to free ourselves from the domination of the spirit of self-seeking, unless we start from within, however far back that may seem to us. I think that the first lesson for us to learn in defending ourselves from the spirit of self-seeking is to learn the real meaning, or as I may say the practical value, of the spirit of humility, that spirit which alone exalteth to any kind of abiding power or place.

"A good many of us will also need, I think, if we are free ourselves from the spirit of self-seeking, to change our associations, our intellectual and moral companionships. What does this mean? Are we to change altogether our social and business environment? Are we to separate ourselves from the self-seekers, as you call them? I answer, no. Let us beware of Pharisaism, which in social life is snobbery. There is snobbery of poverty as well as of riches.

"Serving must be the cure for self-seeking. Now the spirit of service needs redefinition to meet either of these tests. Many of the forms of once effective and satisfying services are outworn. The spirit no longer abides in them. There is no more joy in them. And the world has outgrown them. It is asking for more, far more, and far other, than they can give. The only spirit which can restore the inward joy, and meet the new outward demand is the spirit of sharing. The world of need and of want, which is growing more intelligent in its need and want, is asking for this,—not giving but sharing, for sharing means recognition. This is the meaning of the cry of men everywhere who want anything. 'We want to be recognized.' This has always been the cry, rightly interpreted, of the immigrant amongst us—'we want to be recognized in our children and in our children's children as capable of the best.' This is the cry which comes up from the ranks of labor—'we want to be recognized as a larger factor in the progress of the world.' This is the cry of democracy. 'Democracy,' says Burroughs, 'is the search for leaders.' 'We want to be recognized as capable of leadership.' This is the cry of the nations and races hitherto unmeasured if not unknown—'we want to be recognized.' It is the new spirit of education, of democracy, of missions, of Christianity itself."

In closing President Tucker emphasized the reward to those who are free from self-seeking,—self-respect, and the lot which fell to those who sought for themselves alone,—self-contempt. "We find our lives," said he, "through humility which drives out self-conceit, through fellowship which gives us a place among the searchers after truth, and right actions and brave deeds; through that glorious opportunity of sharing knowledge, power, duty, with coming men and races, which is the distinctive opportunity our age."

The class day exercises of the class of 1908 were held in the traditional places Monday afternoon, and all the exercises passed off with remarkable precision and dispatch. In the College Yard the president of the class, Arthur Thompson Stuart of Lyndonville, Vt., gave a brief address of welcome; Arthur Leon Lewis of Lakeport gave the address to the President of the College; and Joseph Joyce Donahue of Medford, Mass., delivered the class oration. At the Bema in the College Park, John Stephen Everett of South Framingham, Mass., read the history, Joseph King Knight of Hyde Park, Mass., the poem, and Gordon Blanchard of Brookline, Mass., the prophecies. At the stump of the Old Pine the address to the historic tree was delivered by Roland Edward Chesley of West Lebanon, Me., and the ode, written by Arthur Merriam Wyman of Lynn, Mass., was sung.

The principal officers of the class were: President, Arthur Thompson Stuart, Lyndonville, Vt.; secretary, Laurence Metcalf Symmes, Winchester, Mass.; marshal, John Baldwin Glaze, Boulder, Col.; chairman of executive committee, William D Knight, Rockford, Ill.

"The Promenaders," the original musical comedy presented in Webster Hall Monday evening, proved to be an interesting feature of the week. Harry R. Wellman '07, who made a name for himself two years ago by composing "The Founders," which was then considered the best production of the kind ever staged at Dartmouth, and T. C. Wellsted '09, president of the dramatic company, are the composers, librettists and authors of "The Promenaders." In charge of these two, the large cast of sixty men trained for several weeks before the arrival of Fred Bishop of Boston, who put on the finishing touches.

The opera is in three acts. The first scene is in near proximity to Rollins Chapel, the second is a well known eating house, and the third at the Promenade. The plot is woven about the Promenade itself.

A rich young student has invited his girl to the festivities, but the untimely arrival of an unindulgent father causes serious complications, in which the son has a friend take the girl to the Prom in order to deceive the father. But the girl becomes so infatuated with the substitute that she falls in love with him, and

A feature of the performance was the excellent music. "The Prom Girl," perhaps the hit of the entire play, has a lilt that will place it beside Mr. Wellman's "Love Like a Flower Grows," which has attained a large sale since its rendition in "The Founders," two years ago. The choruses were the best that have appeared at Dartmouth. That the opera gave the impression of so finished a whole is due in large part to them.

At the meeting of the Dartmouth chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, held Tuesday morning, officers were elected as follows: President, Prof. C. F. Bradley '73; vice president, Prof. G. D. Lord '84; secretary, Prof. J. M. Poor '97; treasurer, Prof. C. A. Holden '95. A committee of three members on honorary membership was also elected, consisting of Rev. E. L. Gulick '83, Dr. P. S. Conner '58, Prof. A. K. Hardy '94. The meeting also listened to the report of the committee on the publication of a Phi Beta Kappa catalogue of Dartmouth College.

The initiates from the senior class were as follows: Edward Payson Bartlett, Paul Mason Batchelder, Albert Richard Chandler, Edwin Woodbridge Darling, John Detlefsen, Harold Lewis English, Roger Frank Hill, Fred Hudson Hodgson, Joseph King Knight, Jr., Joseph Richard Lunt, Frederick Herman Munkelt, Eugene Miles Prentice, Frederick Edward Schilling, Raymond Warren Sherburne, Park Washburn Stickney.

The leading feature of alumni day was the address before the Alumni Association by Prof. Eugene Wambaugh, LL.D., of Harvard.

Professor Wambaugh briefly sketched the life of Secretary Chase, noting that he was twice governor of Ohio, six years in the United States senate, Secretary of the Treasury and Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. He was born in New Hampshire, graduated from Dartmouth in 1826 and settled in Ohio as a lawyer in 1830. Mr. Chase, said Professor Wambaugh, was engaged during his life in four classes of public service, first as a lawyer, then in the executive, legislative, and judicial departments of the government.

Professor Wambaugh traced carefully the relation of Salmon P. Chase to slavery, and his work in fixing its legal status. From 1837 to the Civil War his method of argument made him known as the "Attorney general of anti-slavery." He was not actuated by philanthropy. His antipathy to slaves was natural in its development, and antagonism first arose in him as a lawyer. He then became opposed politically to it, and in 1847 became a Democrat.

In 1848 he was one of the founders of the Free Soil Party, and two years later he was elected to the United States Senate. He then helped to organize the Liberal Republican party and was successively Republican and Democratic candidate for president. "This may seem a vacillating course," said Professor Wambaugh, "but it is explained on the ground that while the parties kept their names they changed their platforms. Chase changed parties to remain undyingly loyal to his attitude against slavery."

At this point Professor Wambaugh entered into a discussion of Chase as a practicalist and idealist, and showed how he accomplished much for anti-slavery by his power of condensed argument, by his teaching, by precept and example. He failed to control the Democratic machinery but he obtained for anti-slavery a hearing and many followers.

As Secretary of the Treasury Chase served the country in the most critical period of its history. He raised funds for the war by three methods, first by interest-bearing bonds, second through the national banking system, third by legal tender notes. The last memorable service of Mr. Chase was as Chief Justice. He coined the phrase "Indestructible union of indestructible states." He restored the Supreme Court to its old-time dignity and efficiency.

"The elevation of his mind," said Professor Wambaugh, "and the dignity of his personality, made him a person of distinction in any legislative or judicial body, and made that assembly one of power. He was of literary taste of mind, and before he was twenty-five, two articles written by him appeared in the North American Review. He was a scholar in politics, upright, fearless, and intensely religious. He had a distinctive personality of his own, he was a member of the highest legislative body, the Senate, of the highest executive body, the Cabinet, and of the highest judicial body, the Supreme Court. He 'hitched his wagon to a star' and made the wagon go."

The Dartmouth Alumni Association had its annual business meeting Tuesday afternoon, President George H. Adams '73, presiding. Admiral George A. Lyon spoke for the semi-centennial class. The following officers were chosen: President, Judge F. N. Parsons '74; vice presidents, Thomas W. Proctor

'79, J. A. DeBoer '84; secretary, Prof. F. A. Sherman '70; treasurer, P. R. Bugbee '90; statistical secretary, Prof. J. M. Comstock '77; executive committee, Isaac F. Paul '78, Horace G. Pender '97, Prof. T. W. D. Worthen '72; Edwin F. Jones '80, William Hatch '86, Alfred E. Norris '94, E. L. Herman '04; committee on nomination of candidates for trustees, Prof. H. F. Towle '76, O. P. Conant '79, Arthur L. Livermore '88, Jordan G. Rollins '92, George A. Green '98; committee on Tucker fund, W. G. Aborn '93, L. E. Varney '99, H. D. Thrall '06; athletic council, alumni, E. K. Hall '92, C. G. McDavitt '00, I. J. French '01; faculty, Prof. E. J. Bartlett '72, Prof. Craven Laycock '96, Prof. C. E. Bolser '97; undergraduates, J. W. Worthen '09, J. K. Mason '09, G. F. Burns '10.

At four o'clock Tuesday afternoon occurred the annual game of baseball between the College team and a team composed of alumni. Mitchell '09 pitched for the College team, and Cobb '88 for the alumni, the College team winning 4 to 3.

The various Greek letter fraternities and other secret organizations held reunions Tuesday afternoon at five o'clock.

The Dartmouth Dramatic Club scored a success Tuesday evening in its Commencement presentation of "For One Night Only." Webster Hall was crowded with Seniors, alumni, and friends of the College, and their frequent and repeated applause proved that they fully appreciated the clever work of the club.

The graduating exercises of the class of 1908 took place Wednesday morning in Webster Hall. The enrollment of graduates was the largest in the history of the College, numbering 229 men—nine more than last year's class, which was itself a record-breaker. Of the 229, 188 graduated in the academic department, seven received the degree of master of arts, one the degree of doctor of philosophy, nine the degree of master of commercial science, fifteen the degree of civil engineer, and nine the degree of doctor of medicine.

The exercises of the day opened at 9 o'clock, when the Seniors attended their last service in Rollins Chapel. At 9.30 o'clock the graduating class met at the Senior Fence and, led by the band, formed an escort to the procession. The trustees and invited guests formed at Tuck Hall, as did the faculty, while the alumni met at College Hall.

The arrangement of the procession was as follows: The President of the College and the Governor of the State, the acting President of the College and the President of the Alumni Association, the trustees and guests of the College, the Governor's staff, the faculty, and the classes in order of graduation. Headed by the escort the procession passed to Webster Hall, entering between the split ranks of the graduating class. Professor Craven Laycock '96 was marshal, and John Baldwin Glaze class marshal. The program was as follows:

"The After-glow of American Poetry," Fred Hudson Hodgson, Methuen, Mass.; "The Young Goethe," Joseph King Knight, Hyde Park, Mass.; "The Evolution of Private Property," Eugene Miles Prentice, Du Quoin, Ill.; "Some Greek Anticipations of Modern Science," Paul Mason Batchelder, Portsmouth, N. H. (valuedictory rank); "The Place of Greek in American Education," Albert Richard Chandler, Norwich, Conn. (salutatory rank); "The Old Alchemy and the New," Edward Payson Bartlett, Belchertown, Mass.

After the degrees were conferred the graduating class again formed the head of the procession which marched to the College Hall for the alumni dinner. The order of the procession was the same as above. In entering College Hall the procession again passed between the split ranks of the class. About seven hundred sat down to the dinner.

The postprandial speaking was presided over by Hon. George H. Adams '73, the retiring president of the alumni association. Among the speakers were His Excellency Charles M. Floyd, President Harry A. Garfield of Williams College, Acting President John King Lord '68, the Rev. Samuel C. Beane '58, and L. M. Symmes '08.

HONORARY DEGREES

The recipients of honorary degrees were presented by Professor C. F. Richardson and Professor E. J. Bartlett. As they were presented in turn, President Tucker conferred the degrees in the following words:

Howard Nelson Kingsford—man of insight and sympathy, lover of nature, friend of animals and their interpreter, protector against disease, I confer upon you the honorary degree of Master of Arts in recognition of your humane and intelligent service.

Otis Grant Hammond—I confer upon you the degree of Master of Arts for your accuracy in editing State papers, and for the carefulness of research and the breadth of interest shown in your independent studies.

Charles Henry Jones—man of affairs, transferring from college to business the habits of a student, strong in constructive ability, clear in the discussion and presentation of financial questions, I confer upon you the honorary degree of Master of Arts.

John Henry Allen—a scholar who has not suffered the distractions of the pastorate to thwart the spirit or the service of scholarship, I confer upon you the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity.

Newton Marshall Hall—preacher and writer, maintaining the high repute of an influential pulpit, and constantly adding to the popular value of the scriptures by published interpretations, I confer upon you the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity.

Thomas Chalmers—a leader in the ministry, wise to discern public dangers, resolute in the enforcement of personal convictions, I confer upon you the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity.

Charles Jephtha Hill Woodbury—inventor, authority in various departments of applied science, earnest advocate of the application of scientific principles to economic conditions, I confer upon you the honorary degree of Doctor of Science.

Eugene Wambaugh—master and teacher of constitutional law, able to discover and measure the forces which create law, student of men as well as of principles, I deem it fit that the College of the great Jurist whose life and work you have at this time characterized, should confer upon you, as I now do, acting as its representative, the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws.

Charles Merrill Hough—appointed to the federal bench at a time when grave questions were pending, you have met your responsibilities with assured strength and with courage. Your decisions have inspired confidence in your sense of justice and in your ability to administer justice. In recognition of the qualities which make you an upright, fearless, and competent judge, I confer upon you the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws.

Harry Augustus Garfield—president elect of Williams College, in conferring upon you the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws, we do not simply repeat an academic honor: we desire to express our respect and admiration for the attainments which you have shown in your public career, whether professional or academic; and we desire to offer as we best can in this way our congratulations to Williams College upon your succession to the presidency. I cannot declare to you the full meaning of this act, except as in conferring the degree, I give you also the right hand of college fellowship.

John King Lord—son of Dartmouth, embodying its best traditions, illustrating its training in scholarship, in administration, and in public speech, personally the soul of candor and of loyalty, the trustees bid me confer upon you the degree of Doctor of Laws as an expression of the honor in which they hold you, and of their gratitude for your unselfish service.

THE CURRENT INCOME AND EXPENSES OF THE COLLEGE

The period of reconstruction, as defined by the Trustees financially, extended from 1893 to 1905. During this period a reconstruction account was kept open on the treasurer's books, which represented the annual excess of expense above income. This excess was chiefly due to the increased cost of instruction consequent upon the development of the college plant. It was considered that the best possible investment of certain undesignated funds, referred to in Article III of this series, was their use in the process of reconstruction, in the expectation that the amount thus expended would reappear in the increased earning power of the College as a corporation. The result has more than justified the expectation. During the twelve years of reconstruction the amount thus expended was $169,476.89. Within this period the amount received from tuition alone more than quadrupled (1893—$18,188.79; 1905—$77,014.) while the income from productive funds was nearly doubled (1893—$46,923.86; 1905—$88,000).

The reconstruction account was closed in 1905, since which time the current expenses have not been allowed to exceed the current income. The present relation of expense to income may be considered normal. The tables which follow, prepared in the treasurer's office, show the annual income and expense of the College for the last three years, 1905-1908, with an analysis of the various items of expense.

The income and expenses of the College both net and gross during the last three years have been as follows:

	Gross	Net
1905-6	$305,707.89	$225,025.37
1906-7	330,920.18	245,877.70
1907-8	365,772.60	261,868.92

The difference between the net and gross figures covers such items as cost of running the dormitories, expenses of other real estate held as investments, cost in connection with foreclosed property, and scholarships.

An analysis of the figures for the fiscal year just closed shows the following:

INCOME	Gross	Net
Income from Invested Trust Funds	$156,432.68	$106,810.75
Rentals from Reed, Thornton and Wentworth	10,066.31	3,376.13

CLASS ANNIVERSARIES

CLASS OF 1858

The Half-Century Class gathered in Commencement week, academics and scientifics as a class unit. Thirteen of the twenty-two survivors came: George K. Bartholomew, Samuel C. Beane, Joshua W. Beede, Harrison E. Chadwick, William M. Chase, Charles W. Hayes, Lucien O. Livingston, George A. Lyon, Jonathan E. Pecker, Marcus M. Pillsbury, Thomas L. Sanborn, John E. Sinclair, Gustavus B. Williams. All absentees were heard from, some being prevented by ill-timed illness, one by oncoming blindness, others by distance.

The headquarters of the class, kept continually open, was in Richardson Hall, in which pleasant edifice most of the members resided, and some of their kindred and friends. Electric lights blazoned the longendeared figures '58 in the front of the building.

The class supper at College Hall was richly enjoyed, materially, socially, and intellectually, nor did the number thirteen take from the flavor or suppress a happy emotion.

None of the sessions were so formal as to prevent any number of speakers at a time, or to exclude reminiscences, old jokes, or new happenings, as they sprang to mind.
A proper amount of hilarious noise was generated, and no happier faces were seen crossing the campus.

Absent and deceased members were vividly present in thought, speech, and regard.

Admiral George A. Lyon presided royally at the supper, and also spoke for the class at the alumni meeting, where seats were assigned to the members on the platform. Samuel C. Beane was the class's chosen speaker at Commencement Dinner. All agreed that Dartmouth is a growing wonder, and that her worth, quality, and outward attractiveness keep pace with her size. Nevertheless the wish was expressed by the representative of the class at Commencement Dinner that the College might never become so large as to dull the delight of class comradeship, or abate the lively and enduring impression of personality that of student upon student, and that of the teacher upon the taught.

The fact was happily recalled that '58 was the first class in its meetings after graduation, to unite the scientific and the academic men in one body.

Delight was universal that a freshman of Fifty-eight's senior year, who even then became known to many of the class, has for fifteen years been, and still is, the beloved and wonder-working president of Dartmouth.

It was publicly recalled that twenty-seven men of the class were in the Civil War, and that while the class has made but small investment in fame across the sea, it has given to our country able lawyers, sober parsons, eminent educators, skillful physicians, and successful business men; and has produced a governor, a major-general by brevet for brave service in the Union Army, an admiral, a judge of a supreme court, a trustee of Dartmouth—this last being the highest honor attainable in time of peace by an alumnus.

The singular fact was noted that while only about twenty per cent of the academic men of 1858 survive at the half-century's end, a round fifty per cent of the scientific members are still alive and well.

A message of love and admiration was sent to President Tucker.

Lyon and Beane were re-elected president and secretary, and it was voted to meet again in two years at Hanover. Bartholomew, Sinclair, and the secretary were chosen class committee.

The nucleus was made of a class contribution to the Tucker Alumni Scholarship and Instruction Fund, amounting to $100, which has already been increased.

The class expressed a warm feeling of gratitude to the late Dr. Samuel L. Gerould for his valuable Class History, which he compiled as a labor of love shortly before his death in 1906.

An excellent picture of the classmates present sitting on the steps of Dartmouth Hall was photographed by Langill.

Fifty-eight intends to avoid accidents and take good care of its health in anticipation of the meeting in 1910.

Samuel C. Beane, Secretary.

CLASS OF 1868

The class of 1868 held its reunion at Commencement in June, 1908, with a banquet in College Hall Tuesday evening, the 23rd. Fourteen were present, nine of the twenty now living in the academic class, and five of the ten living in the scientific section of the class.

The class gathered about the table at 7.30, and occupied the time most pleasantly and profitably with reminiscences and personal experiences till past midnight; it was decided to issue a modest report at an early date, and a class tax was assessed. The class has apparently one distinction, at least; it graduated more men than entered the class in September, 1864. The number of men on the ground at first was 28, but 33 graduated, of which number 22 were of the original 28. Of the corresponding Chandler class seven entered, of which number only two graduated, though 13 men received the degree of B. S. at our Commencement. Thirty-four was the largest number catalogued in any year for the academics, while 17 were catalogued in the corresponding Chandler class. Only 41 different men were ever connected with the academic section of the class, and of the eight who did not graduate, four remained through sophomore year, two through junior year, one entered junior year but did not remain long, and one died senior year. The size of the class is easily explained through the misfortunes of the War of the Rebellion, which was about to close as the class entered College.

Of the academic section of the class, four have devoted their lives to the ministry, four to the profession of law, four to that of medicine, and four to that of teaching; most of the remaining half have followed persistently some form of business, though a few taught for a few years before going into business.

Three of the four teachers have been teaching in colleges most of the forty years, and one of the doctors has been a professor in medical schools for over thirty years; these four men have contributed 147 years to college teaching, and 79 of these years were in Dartmouth.

C. F. Emerson, Secretary.

CLASS OF 1873

The class of 1873 held an enthusiastic reunion in celebration of the thirty-fifth anniversary of graduation. The Shurtleff House was the headquarters of the class, but as the beds there were minus pillows, some preferred to sleep elsewhere, the larger part going to the Noyes, while some put up at Reed Hall.

The supper was held in the card-room of College Hall, and twenty of the class set down to the banquet; viz., Adams, Bigelow, Bradley, I. R. Clark, Emery, Grout, Higgins, Hayes, Holton, Jarvis, E. H. Jones, Charles H. Jones, Herbert G. King, McCurdy, Merriock, Palmer, Phelps, C. J. Richardson, Saunderson, Stewart. Bradley acted as toastmaster. Telegrams were read from absent members. Major General Frederick C. Ainsworth, Adjutant General of the U. S. Army, sent a telegram expressing regrets that he could not be present. Three members of the class had been granted degrees; viz., Major General F. C. Ainsworth the degree of A. B. as of the class of 1873, Seymour Coman the degree of B.S. as of the class of 1873, and Charles H. Jones the honorary degree of A.M. Mr. Coman was not able to be present. Cigars were furnished by General George H. Adams, president of the Dartmouth Alumni Association and member of '73. With singing, stories of college life, and the telling of experiences of the years since then, the evening passed along quickly. Many letters were read from men too far away to be present, and from some whose health would not permit them to come.

It was resolved to begin preparations for the "big fortieth" in 1913.

S. W. Adriance, Secretary.

CLASS OF 1878

The class held its thirtieth anniversary, June 23 and 24. There were present, Caverly, wife and son, Edson, Ladd, Parkinson and two sons, Bouton, Norton and wife, Gerould and daughter, Weymouth. Sanborn, Andrews, Paul, George, A. O. Brown and wife, Parkhurst, wife and son, Sawyer, wife and daughter, Tucker and wife, Meader and wife, Gray, wife and son, Vitum, Proctor, Small.

At 2.30 lunch was held in College Hall for the men and their families; at eight p. m. was the class banquet for the men alone. The session lasted till 2 a. m. The class roll was called, each man present responded, and all known information relative to absent members was given. It was a hearty, sincere meeting. Andrews and Parkinson furnished original poems.

It was voted to hold reunions every five years, Sanborn was elected president and Small secretary for the next five years.

It was specially gratifying for the class to learn that Parkhurst had been elected to the board of trustees for the College.

Walter H. Small, Secretary.

CLASS OF 1893

The reunion came off as announced, June 20 to 23, inclusive, and the following men were present more or less of the time: Abbott, Aborn, Baker, Bowers, Cox, Dodge, S. P. French, Gordon, Griffith, Gustin, Hunt, Jarvis, Kinney, Lougee, McLaren, Mann, Martyn, Merrill, Metcalf, Pearson, Pender, Place, Runnells, Russell, Sparhawk, Stockwell, Weston, and Wright.

Headquarters were maintained in Sanborn Hall, where most of the boys were quartered, and in addition a private annex was established in the Dartmouth Press building, where courtesies were exchanged with '98 and '03.

Tuesday, the 22d, was the principal day and was fully occupied. In the forenoon the first division defeated the second division at baseball on alumni oval, 8 to 6. In the afternoon the annual meeting of the general alumni association was held and '93 was honored by the choice of Aborn as one of the officers of the Tucker Fund. Later a group photograph was taken on the steps of Dartmouth Hall; and at 7.30 a good dinner was served in the trophy room of College Hall. Metcalf furnished some unique souvenir menus; President Cox acted as toastmaster; and each one present spoke briefly.

Telegrams and letters were received from Van Horn, Caswell, Brown, and Stevens.

On Wednesday we had a large representation in the alumni procession to the graduating exercises and at the lunch in College Hall.

I think everyone present enjoyed the week thoroughly and will be back, if possible, for the twenty-year reunion in 1913.

Meanwhile, it was voted at the dinner to have annual "round-ups," either in Boston or New York, and the president and secretary, with Gordon, were named as committee on such occasions.

Harlan C. Pearson, Secretary.

CLASS OF 1898

The class of '98 gathered at Hanover for its decennial reunion to the number of thirty-one, twelve members being accompanied by their wives. North Fayerweather Hall had been supposed to be reserved for this class, but in some way had been partly invaded by the relatives of the present graduating class, and so nearly one-third of the class of '98 were assigned to the neighboring building of Fayerweather Hall.

A fair proportion of the class reached Hanover Saturday afternoon and evening, and spent the Sabbath there in such ways as seemed best to each.

The first thing distinctly in the nature of a class gathering occurred on Monday evening at six o'clock, when the class attempted to eat supper together at two tables which had been reserved for it at the College Commons. I say "attempted to eat supper together" advisedly, as some were served in ten minutes, some in half an hour, and some not at all. We do not speak of this in a fault-finding way, but simply mention it in passing as one of the diversions of the occasion. Aside from this little drawback the occasion was a very pleasant one, as the whole supper room was constantly enlivened by shouts and songs from the various classes assembled, of which the one attracting the most notice was the group of six white-headed, gray-bearded alumni which represented the class of 1858.

After this supper, those who were artistically inclined went to see "The Promenaders" in Webster Hall, while the others exchanged experiences and reminiscences, and waited for the hour of 10.30 to arrive, when the class gathered at the Hanover Inn for a banquet, which was graced by the presence of the ladies, and Professor and Mrs. H. D. Foster as guests of honor.

E. E. French of West Lebanon, the president of the class, presided, and after grace, said by Professor Foster, and the discussion of the excellent bill of fare, introduced H. W. Blake, as toastmaster of the evening, who called for responses from J. W. Bartlett, J. B. C. Eckstorm, G. A. Green, S. R. Moulton, Charles Duncan, J. P. Carney, George Farley, F. H. Swift, J. R. Chandler, Professor Foster, and E. P. Seelman, all of whom responded with grace and ability, particularly Professor Foster, who spoke very earnestly of the work of the College and of the duties and responsibilities of an instructor. The banquet and exercises lasted until almost daylight, but the strenuous reunion committee had arranged for the class to meet at 8.30 in the morning at the Senior Fence and go to Butterfield Hall for a talk by Professor Adams, and almost everyone turned out, and were well rewarded for so doing, for the genial professor was at his best, and, as he afterwards said to the writer, did what he could to recall the old days. And in fact he told us a great many things about what was going on during the old days in circles with which we then had little acquaintance.

At the close of this talk the class remained for a business session, with the class secretary, H. W. Blake, presiding, and voted to re-elect E. E. French president and H. W. Blake secretary and treasurer, to assess an annual tax of one dollar per member for class expenses upon each New Year's, and to publish a report of the reunion with such letters as could be secured upon next New Year's, and thereafter to publish a class report biennially. It was also voted that F. S. Pope respond for the class at the Alumni Dinner, and that a committee of three be appointed to convey our congratulations to President Tucker.

After the adjournment of this meeting, the class gathered upon the steps of Butterfield Hall and Mr. H. H. H. Langill took a class picture, which it has been arranged to have reproduced in the next class report.

A baseball game between '88 and '98 followed, in which '98 came out decidedly best.

So many of the class had pressing business engagements that they commenced to leave town shortly after Tuesday noon.

Among the members of the class who attended the reunion were four college professors, one man who had served three terms as member of the New York Assembly, one who is now judge of the police court for the city of Nashua, and the writer of a book which has for several months been one of the six most sought books in the country.

Herbert W. Blake, Secretary.

CLASS OF 1903

On Saturday, June 20, the advance guard of the men of 1903 arrived at Hanover to open the festivities marking the fifth milestone from undergraduate days. By Thursday the 25th, one short of fifty of our men made the pilgrimage back to the College, and one of the most loyal, dignified, and enthusiastic reunions ever held at Dartmouth passed into the college traditions. Visitors seemed to have difficulty in determining whether the events of the week were being held in honor of 1903 or 1908, for 1903 held the stage from the rising of the curtain to the falling thereof, and the good folk about Hanover marveled at the kinetic as well as the potential energy displayed by 1903.

Baseball history is laden with momentous problems, but none greater exists than who was the victor in the contest held at the Vale of Tempe between the married men and the single men of the class. "Dog" Cushing, president, playing manager, and captain of the single men's team, claims a win. Kenerson and his band of martial pioneers requested that they be allowed to win, that the faith in their prowess held by their wives might not be shattered, but Cushing thought this illogical and beyond human reasoning, and not being in position to get the view point remained adamant. The spectator element of the class begged to be allowed neutral that the friendships in both factions be retained.

The class dinner was held Monday evening in the private dining-room at the Commons, and no class or contingent that had the remotest reason for receiving one failed to receive a cheer. Incidentally, at that same dinner, eighteen 1903 men pledged six hundred five dollars to the proposed new gymnasium soon to be erected. A. E. Haulon of Danvers, Mass., is chairman of the soliciting committee, and will gladly accept your check for any amount. Don't wait to get his dun, but send him your pledge or check now—the class of 1903 wants the "Gym" as eagerly as do the undergraduates.

On Wednesday morning a class meeting was held, at which Frank W. Wentworth was re-elected president, and Jeremiah F. Mahoney was re-elected secretary. A special reunion in 1910 was voted, and other routine business transacted.

Following is a list of the men present:

Non-grads—Daniels, Kellner, Stockwell, Webb.

Graduates—Avery, Batchelder, Brown, E. L., Brown, M. R., Burnham, Chedel, Conner, Craig, Cushing, Davis, Drown, Dunn, French, Hale, Haney, Haulon, Hausman, Howard, Howes, Jackson, Johnson, Kenerson, Keyes, Lewers, Luce, McElroy, McManus, Mahoney, Neal, R. W., Patch, Reed, Ruppel, Safford, Skinner, Smith, H. E., Smith, J. F., Stevens, Thorpe, Wadham, Watson, Wentworth, F. W., Whelden, Williams, and Wilson.

Jeremiah F. Mahoney, Secretary.

CLASS OF 1905

The triennial reunion of the class of 1905 was held at Hanover during Commencement. No concerted effort was made to have the occasion a "banner event," as it seemed best to reserve most of the fireworks until 1910, when more of the fellows could arrange to be present. We also felt a disinclination to allow our rivalry to dim the splendor of the celebration of the '03 bunch, who certainly made strenuous endeavor to appropriately commemorate the arrival at the fifth milestone. However, the class was well represented, twenty-eight being on hand, as follows: L. R. Chamberlin, Chase, Donnelly, Day, Fall, E. Gilbert, Gregory, "Elsie" Grover, Hale, Hills, Hobart, Holton, Loder, Luce, MacMillan, McClary, Musgrove, Newdick, "Fat" Peirce, Preston, Priest, Proctor, Putnam, H. M. Reed, Harry Smith, Studwell, Tuck, and Lou Wallis.

Rooms had been reserved in Fayerweather, where a large electric sign "'05" was displayed. Table No. 20 was the place of gathering at mealtime at the Commons, where notes regarding the absent ones were exchanged. Plans for the reunion in 1910 were suggested, and a committee was informally chosen to have full charge of the affair. "Rufus" Day is chairman of it, the other members being Chamberlin, Holton, "Fat" Peirce, and E. Gilbert. It is unnecessary to add that the affair will eclipse anything in this line ever seen in Hanover.

Edgar Gilbert, Secretary.

CLASS OF 1857

Secretary, Dr. John H. Clark, Amherst, N. H.

Ira Colby was born in Claremont, N. H., Jan. 11, 1831, and died in his native town, June 27, 1908, after a protracted illness of two years. Mr. Colby's preliminary education was received in the district schools of his native town and at the academies of Marlow, N. H., and Thetford, Vt. During the first year after graduation he taught at Waukesha, Wis., and then returned to Claremont to read law in the office of M. C. McClure '46. In 1860 he was admitted to the bar, and has been in continuous practice since that time. In his profession he was a close student and a hard worker, and attained a high rank. As a speaker he was easy and natural, and had a rare command of language. As a debater there were few who cared to face him. He was a hearty supporter of the Republican party, and was active and influential in its councils in the state. In 1864, 1865, 1872, 1873, 1881, 1883, and 1887 he was a member of the lower house of the state legislature, and in 1869 and 1870 of the senate. In 1876 he was a member of the national convention for the nomination of president. He was solicitor for Sullivan county from 1864 to 1886, with the exception of two years. In 1889-91 he was one of three commissioners to revise and codify the public statutes of New Hampshire. He always took an active interest in the affairs of the town of Claremont, and furthered all progressive movements in its interest. June 30, 1867, he married Louisa M., daughter of Gordon Way of Claremont, who survives him. Their only son is Ira Gordon Colby '94, who has been in partnership with his father in the practice of law.

CLASS OF 1860

Secretary, Rev. Arthur Little, 6 Melville Ave., Dorchester, Mass.

Henry A. Morrill, LL.D., at the end of the last college year retired from his duties as Rufus King professor of constitutional law in the College of Law of the University of Cincinnati, and is to receive an allowance under the Carnegie foundation. The trustees adopted resolutions appreciative of Professor Morrill's thirty-nine years of service with the institution, and elected him as professor emeritus.

CLASS OF 1864

Secretary, Dr. John C. Webster, 946 Jackson Boulevard, Chicago

Rev. Daniel C. Greene, D.D., has come to this country for a year's vacation from his missionary work in Japan. Dr. Greene was one of the first missionaries sent to that country by the American Board, and went there in 1869. He has seen the number of professing Christians in Japan increase in number from six to 60,000. He will be at Jackson, N. H., until September 1st.

CLASS OF 1869

Secretary, Charles P. Chase, Hanover, N. H.

John Lefavour Stanley died at his home in Gloucester, Mass., June 16, after a brief illness of a few days. The son of Herbert and Lydia (Stanley) Stanley, he was born in Beverly, Mass., Aug. 27, 1842. From his graduation until 1875 he taught in Bradford, Mass., and then was for some time principal of the high school in Concord, N. H. On March 20, 1877, he married Annette P. Parsons of Gloucester, the daughter of William Parsons, 2d, and Martha H. (Friend). A few years after this event, he resigned his position in Concord, and removed to Gloucester to enter the employment of his father-in-law in the fishery business. After the death of the latter he entered the firm and assumed the management of the business, and by rare business capacity and good judgment placed the firm in the forefront of the fishery concerns of the city. In December, 1884, his experience as an educator was recognized in his election to the school board of the city, and he has since held a place on that board. In 1883 he was chosen a director of the Cape Ann National Bank, of which institution he has been president since 1899. He was also trustee of several private estates, which he handled with great skill, and added to their value while in his hands. Among other positions which he held at the time of his death were those of trustee of the Addison Gilbert Hospital, director of the Gloucester Lyceum and Sawyer Free Library, and director of the Associated Charities. He was an office-bearer in the First Baptist church. He is thus characterized in an obituary notice: "As a man, Mr. Stanley held a position equal to any man in the community. Of a quiet, kindly, cheerful disposition, with a charm of manner and an easy accessibility rare in a man who was engaged in large affairs, he certainly endeared himself to all with whom he came in contact. Modest to a marked degree, he shunned notoriety of any kind." Mr Stanley leaves a widow, one son, Rev. William P. Stanley of Oberlin, Ohio, and one daughter, Miss Louise Lefavour Stanley.
